

Can I have the center stone in my new MWM ring set by my local jeweler?

Yes – When Mark Morrell creates a setting for you, you may have your own center stone set by the stone setter of your choice. Some important considerations are noted below.

Ask your setter if he/she feels comfortable in hand sculpting your prong tips in the manner that Mark shows in finished photos.

Ask if your setter is comfortable in making the effort to achieve the final fit and finish as seen in Mark's photos. Platinum is very demanding metal to bring to the "fluid" surfaces that Mark is known for.

Your setter is responsible for any missteps or errors in preparing your empty mount for setting. Mark will not be available for repairs made necessary by actions of any person other than Mark.

It is possible to distort, stretch, bend, and crush a ring or other jewelry object during the act of setting a stone. Other stones that may be set into a jewelry item can be loosened and/ or damaged as another stone is being set.

Your setter, NOT Mark or MWM Jewelers Services, will be responsible for the security and longevity of the setting work that setter performs. If any problems arise with your setting surfaces after your setter does their work, those problems must be addressed by your setter – not Mark Morrell or MWM Jewelers Services.

Mark can probably replace your new MWM mounting if it is destroyed by your setter but the cost will be in line with either your original cost for that jewelry item or the prevailing published price of that mounting.

To sum up – It's your stone. You are free to do anything for which you are prepared to take full responsibility for doing or authorizing to be done. If you intend to have subsequent work done on your jewelry piece after it leaves my control, Mark Morrell / MWM Jewelers Services will not assume responsibility for anything that happens to your piece after we have delivered to you or your authorized recipient.

I understand my risk as indicated above and I assume full responsibility for my actions or actions that I authorize after I receive my jewelry piece from Mark Morrell / MWM Jewelers services. Please return this signed document with your package or remittance.
